him on the occasion of an administration of the rite of haptism:

For some time past there has been a revival here during which the church members have acted more like wild beasts in a cage than like human beings. The sight beggars all description, and were one to toil truly all he saw at one of these revival meetings, he would receive many joins blessings for butlesqueing religious ceremonies and the worship of the Deity. Passing the colored church a faw nights ago, I stepped in for a moment where some converts were taking the rites of baptism from a white missionary from Massachusetts.

The scene would have been rather demoniac than Christian had it not been supremely ridiculous. Before the altar was a large tank of water, upon which the converts marched in turn, while the assembled company were shouting, screaming, yelling, whisting, stamping and singing; two groups were dancing in the aisle; some were subtracing or shaking hands; a uegro woman was jumping backwards and firwards over a seat, and delivering insty highly from a corner.

As a convert approached the water there was momentary silence, but after being immersed and stepping out upon a platform on the other side, the yelling and screaming again commencest. Then the newlyborn began a scries of gynamstic feats upon this platform that threatened to break every bone in her body. Going through the most indecent and almost obscene motions, she screamed and kieked until exhausted, and finally ended by stiffening out like a log of wood. Half a dozen stout men now stepped forward to carry her out, the woman remaining all the time in this rigid state, with eyes set, teeth shut hard together, and muscles strained to their ut-most tension. rigid state, with eyes set, teeth shut hard together, and muscles strained to their ut-most tension.

Seven went through this same operation,

Seven went through this same operation, and were each carried out in this stiffened state in the arms of men. The white missionary from Massachusetts uttered the word "giory" as each one passed, with the eyes turned upward, hands closed above his head and an approving smile playing about the hard lines of his mouth. He was a man who understood well how to excite these simple creatures, and had learned the art of working their feelings up to a pitch that was almost frenzy. And all the time he believed, or appeared to believe, that he was doing the work of God.

Bairs But Pointed Will.—A novel will case has just been decided in the New York courts. The will in question was made in 1863 by one Charles Bruesing, formerly an extensive music dealer in New York, translated from the German in which it was written: "When I die, Regina Kaufman, of Handchersheim, shall have all I leave behind me." It was signed and attested. The father and sister of the deceased contested the will on the ground that it was a forgery. The legatee had lived with the testator as his wife, but there was no positive proof that they had been married. The Surrogate refused to admit the will to probate, but on appeal to the Supreme probate, but on appeal to the Supreme Court, the decision was reversed. A large amount was dependent upon the decision.

YANKEE SMARTNESS.—An exchange tells of a bridegroom in the western part of Massachusetts who borrowed a shirt to wear on his wedding day. He wore the same three weeks without a change, and the dutiful wife, at the end of that time took an article of wearing apparel from her own back and quickly transformed it into a robe for her loving spouse. The proud mother-in-law retails the gossip to eager neighbors, in proof of the smartness of her new son.

A printer on his death couch, and about to take an affectionate farewell of his weep-ing friends, observed: "I have finished my 'take,' the galley is 'proved,' and the great. Proof Reader of the Universe has marked the errors; let Death take the 'slugs' out, and I am ready for the 'hell-box.'"
